WHO IS THE HOLY SPIRIT

As it was even prior to creation, God exists eternally as a Trinity of Persons—Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. As the Trinity, these three Persons are inseparable—equal in one divine nature, yet different as distinct persons, The Nicene Creed says the Holy Spirit “proceeds from the Father and the Son.” The Catechism of the Catholic Church states that the Holy Spirit is “Consubstantial (meaning ‘with the same nature or substance’) with the Father and the Son”

The Western (Roman) Catholic tradition says that in the inner life of the Trinity the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father and the Son. The Eastern Catholic tradition says that the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father by indicating that he “comes from the Father through the Son. In both traditions, God’s Trinitarian nature is a mystery and would have forever remained unknown to us were it not divinely revealed by God.

The Old Testament clearly reveals God as the Father, discloses God the Son in a veiled way, and gives us a glimpse of God the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is the last Divine Person revealed and is revealed by Jesus/ He clarifies the developing revelation of the Trinity that occurred through salvation history.
